

Another Savings Opportunity: After-Tax RSP Contributions

The Cummins Inc. and Affiliates Retirement and Savings Plans (RSP) can be a great tool for building your future financial security. To help you save, Cummins matches a portion of your before-tax contributions to the RSP. But did you know that once you reach your before-tax contribution limit, you can also contribute to the RSP on an after-tax basis? This can be a useful way of boosting your retirement savings beyond IRS limits—and, based on your specific plan, you may even be eligible for a company match on a portion of your after-tax RSP contributions.

Please read below for details on how Cummins can help you make after-tax RSP contributions work to your financial advantage.

Overview: How After-Tax Contributions Work

Your after-tax RSP contributions come out of your Cummins take home pay—that is, after applicable taxes (including federal and state income, Social Security, and Medicare taxes) have been deducted. Unlike before-tax contributions, after-tax contributions do not offer the benefit of lowering your overall taxable income. However, after-tax contributions are subject to higher IRS limits (see below), so that you can keep adding to your RSP balance even after you reach your annual before-tax contribution limit. In short, this gives you an additional option for growing the tax-advantaged savings your RSP account provides.

Once invested in the RSP, your after-tax contributions are treated exactly like your before-tax contributions. You can invest your money among the available funds and can change your investment mix at any time.

Your After-Tax Contribution Limits

Your after-tax RSP contribution limits are based on whether or not you are considered a highly compensated employee, as described below. (If you will be age 50 or older in 2017, see the panel at right for additional information.)

- If you are not a non-highly compensated employee, you are allowed to contribute a combined before- and after-tax maximum of 50 percent of your pay to the RSP each year. This means that if you have already reached the IRS before-tax contribution limit of $18,000 for 2017, you can still make after-tax contributions up to the overall 50 percent limit for the year.

Example: If your eligible pay is $60,000, you are allowed to contribute an annual maximum of $30,000 (50 percent) to the plan. After reaching the $18,000 before-tax limit, you would be able to contribute $12,000 on an after-tax basis.

- If you are a highly-compensated employee, you are allowed to contribute a combined before- and after-tax maximum of 50 percent of your pay to the RSP each year, subject to the following limits:
 - A maximum before-tax contribution of $18,000 (for 2017); and
 - A maximum after-tax contribution of 10 percent of your pay.

Catch-Up Contribution Limits

If you are turning age 50 or older in 2017, the IRS allows you to make additional “catch-up” before-tax contributions to your RSP account each year. If applicable, you can contribute an additional $5,000 to your account for 2017. This limit applies to both highly compensated and non-highly compensated employees and is not restricted by other limits on your annual account contributions.

Example: If your eligible pay is $120,000, you would be allowed to contribute up to $18,000 on a before-tax basis, and $12,000 on an after-tax basis—for a total RSP contribution of $30,000 for the year.

Please note that in addition to the limits above, you are subject to IRS section 415 limits on the total amount that you and Cummins can contribute to your RSP account each year. For 2017, this limit is the lesser of 100% of your pay or $53,000. (Please note that this limit does not apply to catch-up contributions; see the sidebar above for more details.)
